An Interesting Paint Scheme

THIS SOUTH AFRICAN AIRLINE DEFINITELY HAS A SENSE OF HUMOR.

University of North Dakota First to Offer a Four-Year Degree in UAV Piloting

A dozen aspiring pilots at the University of North Dakota can't wait to never get off the ground. Following a shifting national defense strategy that calls for more and more unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs) supporting troops on the ground, U. of ND is offering the first four-year degree for UAV pilots hoping to take the sticks in a field expected to swell to a $20 billion industry over the next decade.

Most UAVs deployed in the military are engaged in reconnaissance and intelligence gathering (punctuated by the occasional strike), but the brass has expressed a desire for faster, more networked fighting forces on the ground, and that means more UAVs acting as eyes in the sky. While Cold War-era intel gathering employed satellites and high-flying spy planes to follow broader actions like following troop column movements or monitoring large missile installations, the emerging threats of the 21st century -- multiple small, mobile targets hiding in very hard to reach places -- require a more fleet-of-foot, unit-level means of intelligence gathering and troop support.

A decade ago, there were about 50 UAVs in service; today there are more than 2,400. Civil and commercial applications include weather monitoring, private security, border monitoring, search and rescue and perhaps someday even cargo delivery and other service-oriented tasks.

A tech-savvy generation of students is stepping up to fill a pilot shortage in the field, and if things continue on their current course, in four years time the program's first graduates should find themselves quite employable.

That is, at least until the drones become autonomous.

Hangar 9 - Advance - $50

This is an excellent Sunday flyer.

It is used and has some repairs but is in solid condition.

Gee Bee 28" Floats - $15

These are NIB w/all mountings & instructions

Upgraded Fuel Pumps

Ron has 2 Fuel Pumps that he repaired by upgrading the coupling between the motor and pump. The coupling is the weak point of the pumps and is why they fail. My upgraded pumps are used but work as good as new and will last many times longer than original. One is a Hobbico and the other is a Hangar 9. $10 each

HiTec HS-422 servos

Servos are new but not in boxes. Ron installed them in a plane he was building and then decided to upgrade the servos before he finished.

$30 for all 3 - Tower Price is $12.49 each.

Talk to Rich Mowery Before Buying New RC Equipment

Rich can sell JR and Hanger-9 equipment, radios, planes, etc for well under dealer pricing.

Some examples:

JR9303 2.4 with charger, 921 rec. $500.00 plus JR shipping.

How about a high end AR-9100 safe guard RX..JR's price is $219.00 - Rich can sell it for $180.

Rich is also offering high end RC airplane repair and modification services. He was recently selected, over several out of state repair specialists, to repair and modify a Carden 40% and a Extra 260. Rich really knows what he is doing on the high end birds so give him a call if you or a buddy need help.

AD space available - send pix of your goodies to Earl. If you sell something - also let me know.
